"Two Gun Man" Terrorizes Crowd With Empty Guns

$25 and Costs Penalty for Argument Over Payment of Restaurant Check.

A "Wild West" thriller, as a New Yorker would play it, landed Frank Fox, a Gothamite, in the custody of the police Saturday morning and cost him his week's salary on a charge of carrying concealed weapons.

Fox ordered breakfast in the Bergus lunch room on N. Michigan st., and, it is said, had a dispute with the waiter over the payment of his bill. Bested in the argument, Fox produced a bracelet of revolvers and returned to the restaurant to reopen the argument.

As Motorcycle Officer Karl Smith turned the corner on Colfax and Michigan st., a man ran into him. Out of breath, the man explained he was looking for an officer.

"A man is going to be killed in there," said Smith's informant motioning in the direction of the Bergus place.

A "Wild West" comedy such as would be staged in a screen hold-up was being enacted. Crouching in true handit style, and backing out of the restaurant with his "gats" pointed toward the kitchen, was Fox. The waiters had disappeared, either under the counter or had escaped through the door in the rear.

Smith was upon the man with own gun thrust hard against his stomach and, ordered his prisoner to surrender his weapons.

The street was cleared. Pedestrians had scurried to places of safety.
